Year 4's learning this week

This week, Year 4 welcomed archaeologist and OPA parent, Mr Millward, to lead an historical presentation. Mr Millward spoke with such enthusiasm about the Roman Period, which in turn engaged every learner and prompted a wealth of questions. We were lucky enough to see range of images, representing different aspects of Roman life. Mr Millward narrated these images, sharing insights from his world travels and archaeological digs. The visuals, artefacts and information prompted high-level questioning from our pupils. Our curious enquiries were confidently answered by Mr Millward, which deepened our understanding of our topic 'The Age of the Empire'. We were so inspired by Mr Millward's visit and thank him for taking the time to produce such a comprehensive exhibition and for his involvement in our historical learning journey.

Cycling your bike to school?

It has been lovely to see so many children cycling to school over the past few weeks. However, we have noticed more and more children cycling without a helmet. Cycling helmets are so important because they protect your head if you have a fall or collision whilst on your bike. We will be having a school assembly on this so every child is aware of the importance on wearing a helmet to keep themselves safe.
